WE ALL BACKED THE SOLDIERS IN THE ARGONNE BUT

"Home Again Johnnies"—What About Them?

By Winifred Black.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4.—Five hundred "home again" soldiers standing in line here in San Francisco waiting for a chance at a job.

Almost any kind of a job—at almost anything a week.

Thousands of them standing in just exactly such a line waiting for just exactly such a chance—all over the United States of America today.

That's the good news the American Legion is giving out at the Legion's Employment Agency today.

I wonder how many of these "home again" boys have a letter from Washington in their pockets—a nice, polite, formal letter, written months and months ago, telling the soldier who was fairly aching for good news that his application for compensation had been received, and that it would be attended to—in due time.

LETTERS—NO ACTION.

Funny thing about those letters from Washington.

The newspaper people from New York to San Francisco know them by heart.

Almost any city editor in this country could dictate one of them with his eyes shut.

They're always bringing them in from their beats—the new reporters.

You see, they find so many of them in the pockets of the men who kill themselves.

Odd, isn't it?

Impatient, emotional, unreasonable sort of fellows, they seem to be, these "Home Again" Johnnies—as they're beginning to call themselves. Of course, it was all right for them to be fiery and impulsive in the Argonne, and nobody objected to their impatience when it came to Chateau Thierry—but now that they've got home again, why can't they sit down like sensible men and state with some kind of common sense resignation?

Suicides—haven't you noticed how many of them there are these days? No mystery about them, no love triangle, no domestic troubles—just plain sick and discouraged and down and out and disillusioned and heart-broken, nobody wants him—"Home Again Johnnies"—that's all.

TAPS FOR THE STARVING.

"Home Again Johnnie"—it was he they found beside the lake in Chicago the other day with a bullet in his heart—and a Croix de Guerre pinned to his tattered coat, and a letter from Washington—in his pocket.

It was "Home Again Johnnie" they picked up in the bushes along Riverside Drive in the moonlight the other night. Somebody heard a shot, and there he was, looking like a little boy again with the tears freezing on his cheeks. "Home Again Johnnie" with a letter from Washington in his ragged pocket.

It was he they found out in the park in Los Angeles. "Home Again Johnnie," with the rough draft of a letter to Washington in his coat—a vague, blundering, pleading, puzzled kind of a letter he'd written three times, he said—and he'd proved everything, and maybe somebody had mailed his letters and wouldn't they please—

MAINE TO CALIFORNIA.

No—they don't put very big headlines over this sort of news any more—there's too much of it.

From Maine to California, from Canada to Mexico—there they are, the "Home Again Johnnies," standing in line for work, slipping into an alley now and then to gnaw some hard crust of bread, perhaps—shambaling along the waterfront, only half conscious of what is going on around them, looking for a stray job at anything, anywhere.

Living decently in poor, bare, clean, little rooms—waiting and hoping—poor "Home Again Johnnies"—I wonder what he really thinks of it all, down deep in his heart.

In the hospitals and out—lame and halt and blind and shell-shocked—poor and sick and disillusioned, young in years and bitter—old in the born lack of faith—so they die, day in and day out, and we stand by and see it, and the long line of graves are filling, filling—and the mothers at home—they pray, too—and Washington takes its time.

"Home Again Johnnie," what a light heart he had when he stuck his olive drab cap on the side of his head, and waved a gay "good-bye."

When Johnnie Comes Marching Home Again—Hurrah!—how we did sing it—don't you remember—how we roared it and shouted it, how we tried to laugh and crowd down the lump in the throat. "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home Again!" And the boys in the ranks grinned and held up their heads and fairly burst with pride and loyalty. And then they sailed for France and we held our breath, every one of us, and couldn't bear to hear the boys called the evening papers. What if a submarine—what if—But no, they sailed across all right. And then came the extra—crying through the night like the "raucous voice of Fate itself." They landed—our boys—on the other side. And before we could realize what had happened they were at the front in the trenches in "No Man's Land."

WELCOME BACK, JOHNNIE.

There he was, dear Johnnie, our American Johnnie, from far back in the war, round, rosy, blue-eyed, good, old Johnnie from way down South, black-eyed and lantern-jawed with a delicious accent that was like honey dripping from the comb. Johnnie from Down East where they eat lobsters, and every day and salt mackerel for Sunday.

California Johnnie—how wistfully he did talk about sunshine "Over There" in the mud of the trenches, Chicago Johnnie, New York Johnnie, the stars and stripes.

San Francisco Johnnie—what an eye for the pretty girls he had, and what an appetite for fighting—our boys, every one of them—our very own, blood of our blood, flesh of our flesh, light of our eyes, beat of our hearts—how could we even pretend to live with them so far away—what a day it would be when he came marching home again—dear Johnnie of the Stars and Stripes.

Armistice Day—do you remember how we sang and shouted and beat gongs and rang bells? It was all over—the horror and the misery. Peace again at last—sweet peace with the folded wings and the radiant eyes.

"Home Again" Johnnie—"Home Again"—we could hardly wait for the day. And the first regiment that landed—were you in New York when the signal came—a troop ship at Fire Island—was there ever such a mad-ness of delight? They got the news on lonely farms—nobody knows how—the birds seemed to know it, Johnnie was coming home—he was in the harbor of his home country—he was ashore—he was in the detention camp—hurrah, he was on the train for "Home, Sweet Home."

"Good-bye, old O. D. lid"—what fun he had bellying the new song. He liked it better even than "Over There."

"Good-bye, Forever"—no more trenches, no more hospitals, no more trying wistfully to understand foreign ways—it made the heart sing to think of it.

But that was very long ago—two years, wasn't it?

Today—"Home Again Johnnie" walks the streets looking for work. He stands in line at the employment agency with a dull ache in his heart, hoping against hope.

He watches for the postman. Maybe today he'll get a letter. And we all choke up and applauded and were warm and happy and proud.

What are we doing for them now—our own boys?

We don't even want them to sell pencils—it looks badly and if we catch one of them begging?

What crime have they committed, except fighting and suffering—for us?

"When Johnnie Comes Marching Home Again"—poor Johnnie—I'd hate to start that song anywhere near that line of 500 soldiers who have so many of those polite letters from Washington in their pockets—and nothing else.

I'm afraid "Home Again Johnnie" couldn't remember the chorus.

SOCIETY TO 'TAG' CITY FOR HOSPITAL

Fund Drive for Providence Institution Will Be Started Here Tomorrow.

A large number of Washington society women will "tag" charitably inclined Washingtonians tomorrow, it being the annual tag day for the benefit of the social service department of Providence Hospital.

Although this department of the hospital is only two years old, it has aided over 1,300 families in that time, securing work for the unemployed and aiding poor families in other ways.

The average number of free patients cared for each year at the hospital proper reached 1,500 and the free clinic gives examinations and free medical treatment to about 1,700 annually, regardless of creed or color.

The Providence Hospital was established in 1890 and was soon filled with invalided soldiers of the Civil War. After the Spanish War its wards became filled with veterans of that campaign and the world war has given the hospital almost more veterans than can be cared for. The words are now filled with patients suffering from wounds, gas, and mental disorders, and under the direction of the Public Health Service are being given every possible medical attention as well as vocational training in basketry, weaving and bead work.

Mrs. Charles P. Neill will head the drive tomorrow and will be assisted by the following workers: Miss Ellen Lorraine Dorsey, Mrs. Hannis Taylor, Mrs. C. C. Marbury, Mrs. Hotze, Miss Rose Shea, Mrs. Robert Holden, Madame Calderon, Mrs. Teresa P. Gerald, Madame Calderon, Mrs. John Foote, Mrs. Matthew F. Tighe, Mrs. Risdale, the Misses Fenwick, Mrs. Clifford Lewis, Mrs. Brodhead, Mrs. Joseph Munnell, Mrs. McCallister, Mrs. Angela Ewing, Mrs. P. P. Mullett, Mrs. Charles Walker, Mrs. Castle, Mrs. Roland, Mrs. Brillard, Mrs. Golibart, Mrs. Edward Costigan, Miss Hessler, Mrs. George O'Connor, Mrs. Allen Talbot, Mrs. Wilcox, Mrs. Cupp, Mrs. P. J. Drury, Mrs. Ida Galoway, Mrs. Cipolatti, Mrs. J. E. Garbours, Mrs. T. M. Tucker, Mrs. M. M. Hawkins, Miss Maher, Mrs. M. R. Ready, Mrs. J. T. Leary, Mrs. Mahoney, Mrs. William Fahay, Mrs. G. F.
